Jennifer Fleming Earns Elite CANS Certification, Raising the Bar in Aesthetic Medicine

Manchester, NH – [Oct. 14, 2025] – The Alchemy Clinic is proud to announce that its Founder, Jennifer Fleming, NP, has officially earned the Certified Aesthetic Nurse Specialist (CANS) credential, a distinguished certification awarded by the Plastic Surgical Nursing Certification Board (PSNCB).

By passing the rigorous CANS exam, Fleming has joined an elite group of just 529 Certified Aesthetic Nurse Specialists worldwide. She is the only Nurse Practitioner in New Hampshire, and one of just two nurses statewide, to hold this certification, underscoring her commitment to excellence in aesthetic medicine.

“For me, this certification represents my dedication to staying educated, informed, and at the forefront of a rapidly evolving field,” said Jennifer Fleming, Founder, The Alchemy Clinic. “The knowledge and standards required to achieve CANS allow me to deliver the safest, most advanced, and most effective treatments possible to my clients. And perhaps, most importantly, it means my patients can feel confident that they are receiving care from a provider who is deeply invested in their safety, outcomes and overall experience.”

The CANS credential was established to formally recognize nurses who demonstrate advanced expertise in aesthetic and cosmetic nursing. Candidates must meet strict eligibility requirements, including:

- At least two years of specialty experience in plastic/aesthetic surgery, dermatology, ophthalmology or facial plastic surgery.
- A minimum of 1,000 practice hours in these specialties within the past two years.
- Direct collaboration with or supervision by a board-certified core physician.

With only 529 active Certified Aesthetic Nurse Specialists worldwide, this credential is one of the most selective and respected in the field.
